Show & Tell

Though we no longer produce Hypo Charcoal corn snakes, I thought you'd enjoy seeing how curious newly hatched corns can be. I keep each brood of hatchlings in their incubation boxes until their first shed. They like balling up, vying for the most comfortable spot in the heap, benefiting from temperature and humidity trapped in the collective.