

Show & $ell

{product id=1614}

This 2016 male Lavender corn is thought to be a RedCoat Lavender. He is 66.6% possibly het Lava and 50% possibly het Strawberry Anery. Produced by Catherine Turley this past summer, he is currently 17" long, eating medium to large frozen/thawed pinky mice. If not for many dorsal spinal kinks, this snake would retail for over $275.00, for his amazing genetic heritage. Blue arrows in these two photograph captured two of dorsal spinal kinks, but not all of them. His $95.00 USD price includes Same snake in different pose (blue arrow pointing to another dorsal spinal kink).