

A demonstration of the difference one year of maturity has on two related corn snakes. Both Boot Key Corns, the larger of the two was produced in 2014 by John Finsterwald in Colorado and the 2015 hatchling by Orlando Diaz in Florida. The younger of these will look exactly like the larger one a year from now. This beautiful naturally-occurring corn snake morph is growing in hobby popularity, but this particular Key (Island) form will probably always be rare.
