

Known in our hobby as a Blue Motley, the three gene mutations in this morph are Anery, Motley, and Dilute. The dilute mutation-when in conjunction with the Anery mutation-renders the predominant silvery/blue hues. Not unlike Blue Persian and Blue Siamese cats that are perceived by many to be more gray than blue, this morph of corn snake has many different color renderings that fall in and out of what most consider to be "blue".