

Show & Tell

Slightly yellow, compared to its clutch mates, this egg hatched without complications last year (the concavities filling out as soon as the eggs were set up in damp vermiculite). The demonstration here, of course, is that the embryo was alive and growing.