

Each DAY at 11:00 am. ct (GMT - 5) we will post a different SMR snake being offered at a special price.

All snakes will be chosen for their rarity and/or unique beauty.

FREE U.S. SHIPPING for each Snake-of-the-Day.

{simpleproduct:id=527}

toDAY's SNAKE of the DAY (Sat. March 17, 2013)

Details

#031713

Striped Hypo Bloodred

Female

d.o.h. 2011

33" long on March 16, 2013

$175.00 shipped

Comments: Superior color and size maturity.

This Striped Hypo Bloodred female is now 33" long and eating frozen/thawed fuzzy mice. In the inset pic above you will note that her right eye has a noncircular pupil. Her left eye has a similar anomaly, but not as noticeable. This is not rare in corns, but often missed by the casual observer. I've never known this ocular anomaly to be heritable, but then again, I've never done intentional breeding trials toward that goal. Like most snakes with unpattered and uncontrasting facial colors, both eyes of this snake appear to be disproportionately large for the snake's size, but it's an illusion. She's a sweet snake and was almost embarrassingly calm during her photo-shoot.