

Show & Tell

Adult female Rhino Ratsnake (Gonyosoma boulengeri) just starting to slough her separated epidermal generation of skin. Noting the obvious potential difficulty this species could sometimes have in getting the dead skin disconnected from their rostral appendage, her wild counterparts surely slough their skins in vegetation that offers twigs for catching the rostral tip?