

Each DAY at 11:00 am. ct (GMT - 5) we will post a different SMR snake being offered at a special price.

All snakes will be chosen for their rarity and/or unique beauty.

FREE U.S. SHIPPING for each Snake-of-the-Day.

{simpleproduct:id=528}

toDAY's SNAKE of the DAY (MonDAY. March 18, 2013)

Details

#031813

Striped Champagne

Female

d.o.h. 2010

40" long on March 18, 2013

$250.00 shipped

Comments: She's not much in the pattern or color departments, relative to some Coral Snow types, but she appears to have ovulated so if you're looking for egg practice, she should accept a male for you or for me this week. She needs to be shipped this week. If she is still here on ThursDAY (after this week's last shipping DAY), I'll breed her to something here so she can help keep the lights on at SMR.

Generally speaking, Champagne corns have disorderly pattern. They are fundamentally Striped mutants, so if you breed this snake to a Striped Corn, you'll get 100% Striped mutants, even though some will exhibit the inferior pattern of virtually all Champagne corns. If you breed her to a Motley, all the hatchlings will be pattern mutants, but some will demonstrate better Motley pattern from their Motley sire.

Description of Striped Champagne Snow Corns

