Some of our best High-White Reverse Okeetees originated from this F1 product of crossing Miami Phase with Okeetee. One of the trickiest parts of retaining white ground colors in such Albino Corns is starting with low/non-orange ground color zones, as seen in this snake. In other words, if you seek superior High-White Reverse Okeetees, this will save you two generations of selective breeding. No mutations were used in the production of this "wild-type" corn morph compound.
