

The Snake-of-the-Day headliner of this web site features photographs that we believe will interest our web site visitors. Each daily photograph will be posted at 11:00 am. central (GMT - 5) and replaced in 24 hours. Feel free to make suggestions regarding what snake photographs you would like to see in this daily feature. The animals pictured here are not for sale, unless otherwise noted, but you can find available surplus snakes for sale on the Surplus Page of this web site. We appreciate your patronage and welcome any suggestions you may have.

Left — the adult Palmetto father of the hatchling on the right. Right — the first 2013 Palmetto corn snake out of her egg — which was S.O.T.D. yesterDAY. Of course, no two Palmettos are alike, but when mature, this one DAY-old hatchling should have as much (if not more) color than her father. The father was as pink and feature-less as this hatchling when he was her age. In the bubble view, note the egg tooth which hatchling snakes use to cut out of their eggs. The egg tooth usually wears off within hours of emergence from their eggs.
