

Show & Tell

Two 2017 Sunkissed corns that hatched a few weeks ago. No, I don't feed two snakes in the same cage, but 10 minutes after offering both of these Sunkissed corns new-born pinkies, the Sunkissed Tessera was still wrangling his because he decided to eat it rump first (generally called breach-feeding). Since I could see it would be a little longer for him to swallow this pinky, I photographed him next to the brother who just finished his first meal.