

The Snake-of-the-Day headliner of this web site features photographs that we believe will interest our web site visitors. Each daily photograph will be posted at 11:00 am. central (GMT - 5) and replaced in 24 hours. Feel free to make suggestions regarding what snake photographs you would like to see in this daily feature. The animals pictured here are not for sale, unless otherwise noted, but you can find available surplus snakes for sale on the Surplus Page of this web site. We appreciate your patronage and welcome any suggestions you may have.

(LEFT) Yet ANOTHER boring shot of a Tessera family? At first glance, "yes", but these Tesseras should mature to have lots of black and intensely maroon markings. The common corn in the upper-right-hand corner of the left image has beautifully shaped lateral markings with deeply maroon centers. Ghosty-looking? (RIGHT) A high-black Tessera that was sired by the same male as the hatchlings on the left. BTW, I love the fish skeleton look on the tail that falsely appears to be the spine and ribs showing through the break of the red dorsal stripe.
