

The Snake-of-the-Day headliner of this web site features photographs that we believe will interest our web site visitors. Each daily photograph will be posted at 11:00 am. central (GMT - 5) and replaced in 24 hours. Feel free to make suggestions regarding what snake photographs you would like to see in this daily feature. The animals pictured here are not for sale, unless otherwise noted, but you can find available surplus snakes for sale on the Surplus Page of this web site. We appreciate your patronage and welcome any suggestions you may have.

The Scaleless corn on the left is not a color morph (it is considered a common corn in terms of color) and the Scaleless corn on the right is an Extreme Okeetee from SMR stock. It was produced by Stephane Rouselle in France, using an Extreme Okeetee he purchased from me several years ago. I cannot say if all non-color mutants of the Scaleless variety are as colorful as the one on the left, but it IS encouraging that the potential exists. There is a huge difference in their tails, surely due to the typically thick black blotch margins rendering a banded effect on the tail of most Extreme Okeetees. Imagine one of Graham Criglow's amazing super-extreme Okeetees without scales?
