

Show & Tell

Two strikingly different-looking-but remarkable 2017 Butter corn snakes. The more yellow one in the foreground is a Saffron (Sunkissed Butter) that appears to be Motley, but its lineage suggests that it would actually be a Striped mutant (potentially evidences via the blocky saddles that are spaced somewhat equidistantly)? Only breeding trials will reveal which pattern mutation it actually possesses. The other Butter has amazingly high contrasting colors, but should mature to be yellow-on-yellow?
