

Update pic on one of the "Striped" Sunkissed corns we hatched this year. Ground and pattern color zones seem to be losing their contrast?? I'm still hopeful this will perhaps start a line of truly striped Sunkissed mutants. I DO love the Sunkissed corns that have orderly ovals down the back, but would love to see a truly striped Sunkissed. Traditionally, the sunkissed gene mutation does not play well with other pattern mutations in corn snakes. Most of the time that's a good thing, but other times not so much.
