

Show & Tell

This is what a superior Buckskin Okeetee will look like in the first weeks of life. Note the yellowish-gray ground color zones and saddles that almost show no color. They resemble Anery corns, except for the orange on the head and inside the neucal marking. Later, the red centers of their saddle markings will slowly saturate in color.