

Striped Bloodred corns usually lose the striping they have when they hatch. Some hatch with very little striping and some hatch with a long obvious stripe, but both will lose most or all of the obvious striping through maturity.