

This is the most busily-marked Palmetto so far. All newly hatched Palmettos show almost no red, but there was so much black and gray on this one I thought he could be an Anery Palmetto. After a few months, more of the red is now showing, demonstrating that he is not an Anery version of the Palmetto mutation.