

Still undetermined is the inheritance of the Java Morph. Here is an F1 generation product of pairing a Java with a Kastanie. The Java morph could end up being a variant of the Kastanie mutation, a new mutation, or perhaps nothing more than a wild-type variant. One more generation may shed light on the subject, but when mutations are inherently so much like wild-type corns, it's often difficult to discern their heritability.