

{product id=879}

2013 Male Tessera Het Scaleless Anery. He is 31" long, eating one frozen/thawed large pinky or small fuzzy mouse every four to five DAYS. He should reach breeding maturity before 2015, but, if not, surely shortly thereafter. His $1,100.00 usd price includes free shipping to lower-

< style="line-height: 15.8080005645752px;" />

The target value of using this snake for a breeder is to be the first Scaleless Anery Tessera ever produced. While a Scale-less Anery Tessera may seem genetically unlikely in one brood of babies from two triple-hets, it's not. Approximately half of the progeny from this couple will be Tesseras of some kind (Tessera, Anery Tessera, Scaleless Tessera, and Scaleless Anery Tessera). There aren't so many mutations in this marriage that hitting the target will be rare. It's likely that one or two of the babies from the first pairing could be the trifecta; Scaleless Anery Tessera?